INTERESTING OPERATION.

Chief Engineer Melcher and Party Take Measurements of Hoosac Tunnel.

The operation of measuring the Hoosac Tunnel is periodically performed. The great "hole in the wall" was measured some four or five years ago and again the interesting performance was gone through with just the other day. The purpose of these measurements from time to time is to keep on file in the offices of the Fitchburg railway a record of this great engineering work. The tunnel is gradually growing larger. A gang of miners is constantly watching it and from time to time rock that shows signs of loosening is removed.

Through the courtesy of the officials of the Fitchburg road it was the privilege of a TRANSCRIPT representative to accompany the party who made the tour of inspection. The party was made up of F. O. Melcher, chief engineer of the road, his assistant, Harry W. Hayes, both of Fitchburg, J. L. Shaanks, roadmaster, with headquarters at Greenfield, J. W. McLaughlin, roadmaster, William, Percy Rand, engineer, Fitchburg, Conductor A. S. Todd, Brakemen James and Walt, Chief Miner Patrick Goff and Agent D. R. Wait of this city. Mr. Goff was a miner on the tunnel during the course of its erection and has been connected with the work in this capacity during all the intervening years. He knows every foot of the structure.

The contrivance for taking the measurements of the mammoth hole is decidedly ingenious. Upon a flat car is erected a platform and above this an upright flat surface about the size of a school blackboard. Radiating from the top and one side of this standard are six long arms, the standard serving as a fulcrum. To the short end of each arm are attached heavy spiral springs, which upon being attached to the standard, or observatory platform, throw the long end of the arms against the top and side of the arch of the tunnel. At each variation of the height or width the arm moves down or up or out an inch, registering with a pencil attached to it on the large sheet prepared by the engineers for taking the record.

Start was made from the west end of the tunnel, the car moving at the rate of about four miles an hour. It therefore took a little over an hour to go through. The gliding of the arms upon the walls was almost noiseless wherever the arch was broken, but when it struck the native rock, and the great portion of the tunnel is cut through solid rock, the arms clattered with a racket that resembled a boiler factory, owing to the uneven surfaces. Not only did the arms serve their purpose in registering the height and width but they also acted as tunnel sweepers. They sent down upon the heads of the party in the open observation car a continual shower of rock. When the tour was made every member of the party could easily have been taken for a chimney sweeper after visiting a particularly rich chimney.

Arriving at the east end the car was turned around and the operation repeated on the other track. Thus the engineers secured a complete record of the varying dimensions of the tunnel, to keep on file and to compare with similar records taken in previous years.

Several stops were made going in either direction, giving members of the party an excellent opportunity to study the interior of the structure and to marvel even at this distant day at the magnitude of this triumph of engineering skill accomplished a century ago. At the central shaft an attempt was made to climb the rocky stairs leading up but after a couple of steps had broken under a man's weight it was abandoned.

A BETTER BERTH.

Hours Reduced One-Third and the Pay the Same as Before.

E. L. Mallory, who recently returned to his home in New Durham, N. H., after a visit at the home of his father, Charles Mallory of Yale street, writes that since his return he has received what amounts to a welcome promotion. Mr. Mallory has worked as a telegraph operator for the West Shore railroad for 11 years, half of which time he worked nights. He was obliged to be on duty 12 hours out of 24. Some time ago he suggested to the superintendent that the company would get better service by putting on another man and having eight hours constitute a day's work. The matter was taken under consideration and the company finally decided to make the change. Mr. Mallory, being the oldest employee in point of service, was given his choice in the hours he would work and took from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. As he gets under the new arrangement the same pay he did before, $75 a month, the change is very acceptable to him.

Mr. O'Neill is one of the best artists on the American stage and he is always supported by an excellent company.

A Local "Diggin."

For an hour Tuesday afternoon it looked as if a Klondike had been discovered on Holden street. There was a crowd of boys in the gutter and they were digging in black mounds of earth for valuables. The earth had been removed from under an old platform that had run in front of the Blackinton block. The platform had been a slatted one and the youthful prospectors reasoned that it contained something rich must have dropped through it sometime or other. Shovels were obtained and the whole mass was riddled for the poor reward of a few stray pennies, a few old buttons, and some pieces of shoe strings.

JURY STILL OUT.

The Lutger Jurors Having a Hard Time of It.

Criminal Court Building, Chicago, Oct. 20.—Judge Tuthill called the Lutger jury into the court at 10.30 a. m. From a neighboring window Juror Harley was seen shaking hands with the other jurors and it is now believed that a verdict has been reached. Ten minutes later the judge sent for the prisoner and Lutger was taken up the back elevator in the building into court.

The star chamber conference in the court room was sought by the members of the jury. States Attorney Deane gave the facts to the associated press. It was apparent also who had been holding the jury. Judge Tuthill inquired if the jury had any communication to make. Juror Harley was on his feet in a jiffy and began asking questions. He desired instruction on question of fact.

Harley wanted to know if it was possible to leave out certain evidence altogether, exclude it entirely and then consider the other evidence and make up a verdict from it. This query excited the laughter of those who were opposed to Harley and was noticeable that nine of the jurors laughed.

Judge Tuthill replied that the question was an improper one for him to answer. "You have your instructions," said his honor. "Note the reading of them. You will find that nearly all of them contain the language 'and if after concluding all the evidence you find beyond a reasonable doubt, etc.' That should be sufficient. The court cannot now instruct you upon a question of fact. You will retire to your jury room and return to the further consideration of the case."

Spencer Still Alive.

Great Barrington, Mass., Oct. 20.—George Spencer, the victim of Saturday's shooting, at a late hour last night, was still living, although death had been expected momentarily since it was found that the supposed lifeless body still retained a faint spark of vitality, some two hours after it was first discovered.

20,000 BOOKS DENOUNCED.

Expurgatorius Index Indicates What May Be Read by Catholics.

The faithful subjects of the Church of Rome are forbidden in the Index Expurgatorius to read twenty thousand books. These are the works of eight thousand authors. Everything that Roman wrote is condemned, not only the more profane, from a Roman Catholic standpoint, of Voltaire's works appear in the index. Taine's "History of English Literature" is under the ban, but his studies on the French Revolution are omitted from the list of prohibited books by the wish of Leo XIII. All of Cousin's works are condemned, but only four of Lamartine. For obvious reasons, Eugene Sue's "Wandering Jew" and the "Mysteries of Paris" are both forbidden reading. The index contains a complete catalogue of the works of both the older and younger Dumas, but only two of Victor Hugo's books are found in it—"Les Miserables" and "Notre Dame de Paris." There are 20 Zolas in the index—one is the author of "Rome" the other is a theologian of the last century.—Boston Evening Transcript.

A Safe Course.

An excellent reply was that once made by a Yankee pilot to the owner of a Mississippi River steamboat. The boat was at New Orleans, and the Yankee applied for the vacant post of pilot, saying that he thought he could give satisfaction, provided they were "lookin' for a man about his size and build."

"Your size and build will do well enough," said the owner, surveying the tank form and rugged face of the applicant with some amusement, "but do you know about the river, where the snags are, and so on?"

"Well, I'm pretty well acquainted with the river," drawled the Yankee, with his eyes fixed on a stick he was whittling, "but when you come to talkin' about the snags, I don't know exactly where they are, I must say."

"Don't know where the snags are!" said the boat-owner, in a tone of disgust; "then how do you expect to get a position as pilot on this river?"

"Well, sir," said the Yankee, raising a pair of keen eyes from his whittling and meeting his questioner's stern gaze with a whimsical smile. "I may not know just where the snags are, but you can depend upon me knowin' where they ain't, and that's where I calculate to do my sailin'."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE In the Spring In the Summer In the Fall In the Winter IN THE TRANSCRIPT!

THE JURORS SLEPT.

Another Day of Suspense In the Lutger Case.

DELIBERATION WAS SUSPENDED.

Respite Permitted by Judge Tuthill and Cots Furnished.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—The long afternoon wore slowly away in the court room with nothing to relieve its monotony save the request of the jury in the Lutger case for the map of the factory and surroundings. It was believed at first that some point in reference to the vicinity was under consideration, but later information developed the fact that the jury, in order to circumvent the efforts of reporters who, from an adjoining building, were surveying them with telescopes, had placed the map across the window, shutting out all views of their room. Judge Tuthill is giving the jury every chance to agree before permitting them to report that they are unable to reach a decision.

Toward evening the jury sent in for the contract which Matron Kurth gave Getuliba Schunk at the time she took her into her home as a domestic. When the police learned two months ago that the girl, whose age is 11, had stated that she saw Lutger and his wife walk toward the factory on the night of May 1, they took her to the Sheffield avenue police station, and later placed her in the home of Matron Kurth. A contract was signed by Mrs. Kurth to pay the girl $2 per week. This contract was read during the trial and offered in evidence. During the collection of the documents to send to the jury room, it was left out. One of the jurors wanted to see it, and, not finding it, sent for the paper. Attorney Phalen was inclined to the opinion that the contract had been omitted on purpose. State's Attorney Deane denied this, and said he had no objection to it going to the jury. It was accordingly sent.

Two letters offering bribes to the foreman of the jury which had been received by Judge Tuthill, are now in possession of the state's attorney, who is not disposed to regard the attempted bribery seriously. Inspector Schack and Attorney McGowan took upon the matter with suspicion. The first letter was received last Monday morning. It was dated Oct. 16, the day upon which it was originally believed the case would go to the jury. It reads:

"Mr. Foreman: Dear sir—A powerful influence is at work to save Lutger. Money is scarce, and in those hard times it is not easy to get money. I have $1000 to divide among you 12 men. If you want it, have two good men smooth-tongued, that are discreet, at the southeast corner of Randolph and Dearborn streets at 1 o'clock p. m. Let them wear white linen neckties or, if they prefer it, red bow ties. Everything will be alright. The money is secure in a bank street bank. George Arltill."

The second letter is under date of Oct. 15 and is also addressed to the foreman. It is as follows:

"Dear sir—Why didn't you have the young men at the corner as suggested? In the present times $100 is pretty useful. If you will agree to vote Lutger free we can yet arrange matters. Send the young men tomorrow. George Arltill."

Judge Tuthill opens all mail sent to the jurors and in this way these letters fell into the hands of the court. His honor is inclined to regard the letters as a hoax. Mr. Deane thinks the letters were gotten up by enterprising newspaper reporters. Both letters were written in ink, were in good penmanship and enclosed in white linen envelopes.

A few minutes after 8 o'clock Judge Tuthill appeared at the criminal court building and went directly to the courtroom, where he was told by the bailiffs that several of the jurors were at most exhausted by the ordeal to which they were not allowed some rest it would certainly result in some of them becoming ill. The jury also sent word that there was no immediate prospect of an agreement, and under the circumstances the judge gave orders that they be permitted to drop the case and go to sleep.

Cots were quickly dragged in, and within a few minutes every juror was stretched out at full length, and all consideration of the case was off until they should wake in the morning. "They have not agreed as yet," said Judge Tuthill when he left the courtroom, "and when I became convinced that there was little prospect of their doing so, and saw how weary some of them were, I told them to go to sleep and try to agree in the morning. It would be no use in keeping them up all of the night, because in the first place two or three of them would be in a short time utterly incapacitated by fatigue, and no agreement could ever be obtained from men who are nervous from loss of sleep and exhausted with argument. When I came to the court I had no idea that a verdict would be reached, but I was anxious to do all I could for the comfort of the jurors. That was really the cause of my visit to the building."

There were rumors of all kinds afloat during the evening, all of them being to the effect that the friends of Lutger on the jury were weakening. It was known during the day that the vote stood eight to four, and last night the rumors were that it was ten for the state penalty and two for acquittal. A later story was that it stood eleven for hanging and one for acquittal. Juror Harley is admitted to be the stout friend of Lutger on the jury, and it is he who is leading the fight for an acquittal.

Over in the jail Lutger anxiously awaits word from the jury room. He tried as usual to keep up an appearance of indifference and as usual made a failure of it. "If they don't agree," he said, "I will get bail and I will be out of this. I can give bail for a million if they want that much. My wife is living somewhere, but I admit she is having a lot of fun with me at present. There is one thing sure," the prisoner said with great positiveness, "there will be no conviction in this case. It will be an acquittal or a disagreement." Asked where he obtained his information, he smiled and said: "Oh, I know; you no longer. I won't be convicted though, you can let on that."

BOX ROBBERING GANG'S WORK.

Losses Outside New England Aggregate Nearly Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Boston, Oct. 20.—The postal authorities, Inspector White says, had no idea that the operations of the box robbing gang were so extensive. This was because the victims in the large cities did not report the number of times they had been victimized. In the losses outside of New England amount to as far as between $75,000 and $100,000. The New England loss has not so far been figured out as yet, but it is heavy. The fact that about 200 boxes in Boston alone have been robbed and some $10,000 in checks taken, besides a large sum in cash, goes to show how extensively the gang operates.

Postal Inspector Snow and Executive Clerk Murray spent all of yesterday preparing their case against the persons who are to be arraigned before the United States commissioner Thursday. The makers of all checks stolen in Boston by members of the gang, now in the possession of the authorities, were interviewed, and as a result the inspectors reached the conclusion that Ernest Parsons is the man they want as much as any other connected with the great gang. The $400 check which Parsons passed in Chelsea, they say, shows the cleverest bit of check raising they have ever seen. This was originally a check for $14 and some cents. By the use of acids so cleverly applied as not to mar or stain the paper, the number in the degree, the ratio of the paper was raised and that of Ernest Parsons was written in, while the word "hundred" was also obliterated and "four hundred" substituted. When this was presented at the bank by Parsons the amount was paid over just as soon as Parsons satisfied the teller of his identity. Afterward close examination of the check by experts failed to reveal any irregularity about it, and they were only convinced that it had been altered when the stub of the book from which it was torn was exhibited to them.

OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

Supply Wagon With Twelve Men Dropped Eight Feet at Lawrence, Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 20.—While engine company company three was responding to a forest fire at 1:50 this morning on Andover street the supply wagon with 12 men was precipitated over an embankment where a new road was being cut through. The firemen did not know of the improvement being made, and as the locality was very dark the wagon and men were thrown a distance of eight feet.

The men and horses were badly mired and the contents of the wagon was scattered over them. John H. Dean, driver, fell beneath the horses and was most seriously injured. All of the other men were freed at once and soon succeeded in removing the horses from the wagon. The injured are John Arndel, hands and arms badly hurt, Harry Goutier, face cut and badly bruised, Harry Hayes, Lieutenant Gibson, John Lynch and Dennis Duran, bruised about the body.

MANITOBA'S SCHOOL QUESTION.

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.—A letter has been received in the city which purports to contain the text of the finding in the school question based on the report of Mr. Delval. The finding, as outlined in the letter, is regarded as the most favorable view of the settlement reached between the federal and local governments. It states that "where interests differ but do not clash the church desires that there shall be harmony."

This is interpreted to mean that both church and state have an interest in education, one in religious and the other in secular phases, and where both can attain their object without a sacrifice of cardinal principles in one system or schools, these may be adopted by the church. It is said the report would have been made public a fortnight ago, but was stayed pending the arrival in Rome of Archbishop Turcard, who, according to common reports, bears a letter to the holy father expressing the views of Mr. Langevin and other Canadian bishops. It is further alleged that all the bishops were informed regarding the nature of Mr. Delval's recommendations.

MRS. LANGTRY'S FLORAL WREATH.

Chester, Eng., Oct. 20.—The remains of Edward Langtry, the husband of Lily Langtry, the actress, who died in an asylum for the insane here on 11 May last, were interred yesterday. Mrs. Langtry sent a floral wreath to be deposited on the casket. The wreath was tied with ribbons in the racing colors of "Mr. Jersey" the name under which the actress races her horses. These colors are turquoise and race, the jockey riding her mare in a lawn wearing a jacket of turquoise with fawn hoops and a turquoise cap.

BULLET IN A WOMAN'S BREAST.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—Dominick Caminade, aged 47 years, last night shot and probably fatally wounded his wife, Julia, aged 34. The couple have been living apart for several years, and Caminade has tried to get her to go to his home with him. She refused, and he fired the ball entering the woman's breast. Caminade was arrested, as was also A. G. Saylor, who is said to live with Mrs. Caminade. Caminade is a traveling salesman for a Pittsburg firm.

KILLED A MAN A MINUTE.

Private Fontaine of Mississippi kept this tip for sixty minutes.

Lamar Fontaine, of Mississippi killed sixty men in sixty minutes during the war. He bears a written certificate to this effect from General Robert E. Lee. Now Mr. Fontaine does not care to be called colonel.

It was in the battle of Waterloo Bridge, just below Warrenton, Va., in August, 1862, and immediately before the second battle of Manassas, that General Lee witnessed Fontaine's feat of killing "sixty Yankees in sixty minutes."

Stonewall Jackson, under whom Fontaine served, was flanking Pope. The Confederate sharpshooters had possession of a long frame building, and were pouring death into Pope's ranks, when Lee rode up.

The General had heard of Fontaine's wonderful ability as a marksman, and paid him a visit. A Federal battery was then directed on the sharpshooters.

"Train your glass on No. 1, at gun No. 1," Fontaine said to General Lee, "and you will see him jump up in the air in a minute and another man will have to take his place."

Then he went on and killed sixty men, one after another, each in about a minute, until Lee told him to stop. "Doesn't your conscience ever hurt you when you do work of this kind?" inquired Lee.

"Why, General," replied Fontaine, "when I enlisted in the army it was with the understanding that I was to kill as many of the enemy as I could. If I had any conscientious scruples against it I would quit the army. Don't you expect us to kill?"

Fontaine served also with Generals Stewart and Johnston. He took part in twenty-seven pitched battles, fifty-eight skirmishes and over a hundred individual skirmishes. He was reputed the best marksman with rifle or revolver in either army.

Fontaine was wounded sixty-seven times and thirteen times his lungs were pierced. Twice his heart was grazed and these scratches caused that organ to be so enlarged that physicians who examine him to-day without knowing his history say that he is in danger of immediate death. But he feels well enough. So often has he been wounded that he cannot remember where he got such and such a scar without consulting the record.

The bloody and amazing incident of the "sixty men in sixty minutes" is very far from being the only astounding one in Fontaine's career. He has had more adventures and more perilous ones than any writer of romance, even Dumas, ever dared attribute to his hero.

He possesses the following startling testimonials from "Stonewall" Jackson:

"I believe that during his service with me as sharpshooter, Lamar Fontaine killed more of the enemy than any company in my command."

A Honeymoon at a Farm House.

It is no longer fashionable for the bride couple to go to large cities or on a trip to Europe for their wedding journey, says the Indianapolis Journal. The sentimental period must be spent in some quiet place, a wayside inn or in some quiet old town. A couple who desired to go to a country place near by advertised in a paper that it is distributed well over the state for just what they would like in the way of an ideal resort for their honeymoon. Not more than a week or ten days after the advertisement appeared they received a dozen or more answers. Previous to the wedding the husband-to-be visited several of those whose letters read the most invitingly and selected the place he liked the best. The four weeks they spent there were more like a story book than a reality. The rooms were large and airy, the table was exquisite in its cleanliness and the viands that were spread before them were deliciously tempting. A horse and carriage were at their disposal, the river not more than a mile away, and scenery and loquacious spots were so plentiful that a new one could be found every day.

An Unburied King.

It will surprise most people to learn that the late King of Spain is not yet buried, but, covered with a winding sheet, lies on a marble slab in a vault of the Escorial. This is in accordance with a custom dating from the year 1700. The body will lie there it is said the present King dies. Then it will be deposited with great pomp beside the remains of his predecessors in the channel of the Escurial.
